Chennai: The Prince of Arcot, Nawab Mohammed Abdul Ali, who inaugurated the LIBA-INZFA Business Summit — 2015 organised by the Loyola Institute of Business Administration (LIBA) and India-New Zealand Friendship Association (INZFA), in the city on Monday, said "there is excellent potential for talented communities in both countries to connect more intensively not only at the people-to-people and cultural level, but also in the academic, economic and commercial, scientific and technological, medical research and other sectors." Such complementarity becomes particularly relevant in the current era of globalisation, jet travel and smart phone communications, when traditional, geographical divide can be considerably addressed through modern technology and innovation, he said.

"Through friendship, all nations can be involved in responsible creative activities with a view to solving problems of the world like poverty, disease and ignorance. India is ready to work closely with all other countries in the spirit of solidarity to boost the recovery of the global economy, as our Prime Minister, Narendra Modi stands for. We seek to foster closer ties between India and New Zealand in various fields," the Prince pointed out.
